Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, a System1 Company Chris Goldberg/Moment/Getty Images A typical basketball team roster includes 12 players. However, the actual size of the list is often at the discretion of the coach and can be significantly smaller or larger, depending on the level of the game and the rules set by the league's governing body. At the pro level, the National Basketball Association allows teams to carry no more than 15 players on their roster at any given time. In college, the NCAA does not enforce roster size at Section I level, even though there is a limit of 13 scholarships per school at the same time, without limiting the number of walk-ons. The invention of basketball is a matter of sports spy: Canadian doctor and priest James Naismith needed a way to keep boys active in his school and out of trouble throughout the Massachusetts winter of 1891. He was training the game when he bounced the ball into the peach basket. Your reasons for starting a basketball league can be so simple: something fun and healthy to do, for adults in your community, for example, or for youth in rural churches. Or you have higher ambitions, such as nurturing serious high school students for college or raising money for charity. Regardless of your motives, first make sure there is enough interest in supporting the venture. Expand the word by posting an invitation to a social media site. Send a press release to regional newspapers. Get an interview on a local TV show. Organize informal shootings to study the enthusiasm of the local community and the level of talent. It is also good to get firm advice on the legal and financial commitments involved, as both can be substantial. Your goals and response to your inquiries will help you make many of the decisions that the league's launch means. For example, what legal entity will the league? What office and court staff will you need? Where are you going to play? What rules are you going to apply? Will you charge an entrance fee? Selling merchandise? The scale of your league will also give you an idea of how much it will cost to run it. Even if you're planning a nonprofit organization that relies on donations and is employed by volunteers, you'll still have insurance, paperwork, transportation, equipment, supplies and more. Managing the league is a big responsibility. But if you're in for the game, it's an opportunity to make a positive contribution to your community - physically, socially and economically. Look what James Naismith started with one ball and a couple of peaches. On the next page, we will explore some of the main challenges you will face and some options for meeting them. Page 2 Forget about field scoring points; The real fame in intramural sports lies in the best name of the team. After all, anyone can learn how to hit softball or score volleyball, but it takes real talent to make a name that makes both audiences and participants laugh. The team's best intramural names aren't just but also pepper with internal jokes, innuendo and more than a little controversy. Of course, most colleges and universities with intramural leagues have rules to keep team names from becoming too explicit or offensive, but that doesn't stop students from pushing the restrictions. Some colleges even offer extra points to teams that make themselves truly innovative and interesting names, while a name that violates the rules could result in penalties. With thousands of intramural teams taking part in the sport, from flag football to bowling, there is no shortage of crazy team names that show the wild and fun nature of intramural sports. Read on and discover our 10 choices of funny intramural team names. Picture: Wiki Commons by Arturo Pardavila III This is a Sunday afternoon in the middle of spring. Life comes back when trees and flowers bloom. Weeks of rain have passed, and the sun is spilling through the blinds into the living room, where you just turned on a baseball game. You look at the screen and you realize you don't even know the two teams that play. How often is that for you? Are you just a fan in the pass or a real fan of a baseball game? There is a reason that baseball is called America's Pastime, because for more than a century it has been one of the most popular sports in North America. Of course, when it comes to major league baseball, there have been many changes since the American League came together with the National League to play the first modern World Series in 1903. One of the biggest changes is the expansion of the league into the 30 teams that make up it today. Will you be able to identify all 30 teams competing in the majors? From the east coast of Pennsylvania to the port cities of Washington and California, you'll need to know both the historic franchise and the new entries in the league. If you're ready, start and see if you can knock this MLB quiz out of the park.
